Questions and Discussion –All

Key Long-Term Outcomes

1. Improved community well-being.
2. Fewer people engaged with the public safety system.
3. Fewer people incarcerated.
4. Fewer people financially obligated to the public safety system.

With intentional focus on improving outcomes for those most harmed in Black and American Indian communities.

Appropriate Responses Initiative (ARI)

Mission:

- Support 911 dispatch, public wellness system and community institutions to more appropriately respond to people in need.
- Putting Well-being & Community at the Center of Justice System Transformation.

Goals:

Development of new response types and enhancements to dispatch countywide resources.

- Expanding Social Services and Public Health responses.
- Creating Community Based response capability.
- Enhancing 9-1-1 protocols so new response options can be fully and appropriately utilized.

Embedded Social Worker Work Flow

Incoming 9-1-1 Call

Telecommunicator (TC)
Answers Call

Initial Screening

If call includes:

- Wellness checks
- Person in crisis
- Juvenile
- Resource calls
- Suicide in progress

TC flags
Social Worker(s)

Social Worker joins call for a deeper assessment

ECC SW ROLE: Brief Screening (presenting situation; determine immediate needs) – dispatch crisis team immediately

TC clears the call once determined with the Social Worker if the calls is for crisis or police to address

Crisis staff then attempt to meet with the caller/family/etc
regarding the call to offer an alternative from a police response

Evaluation

What is Evaluation Process

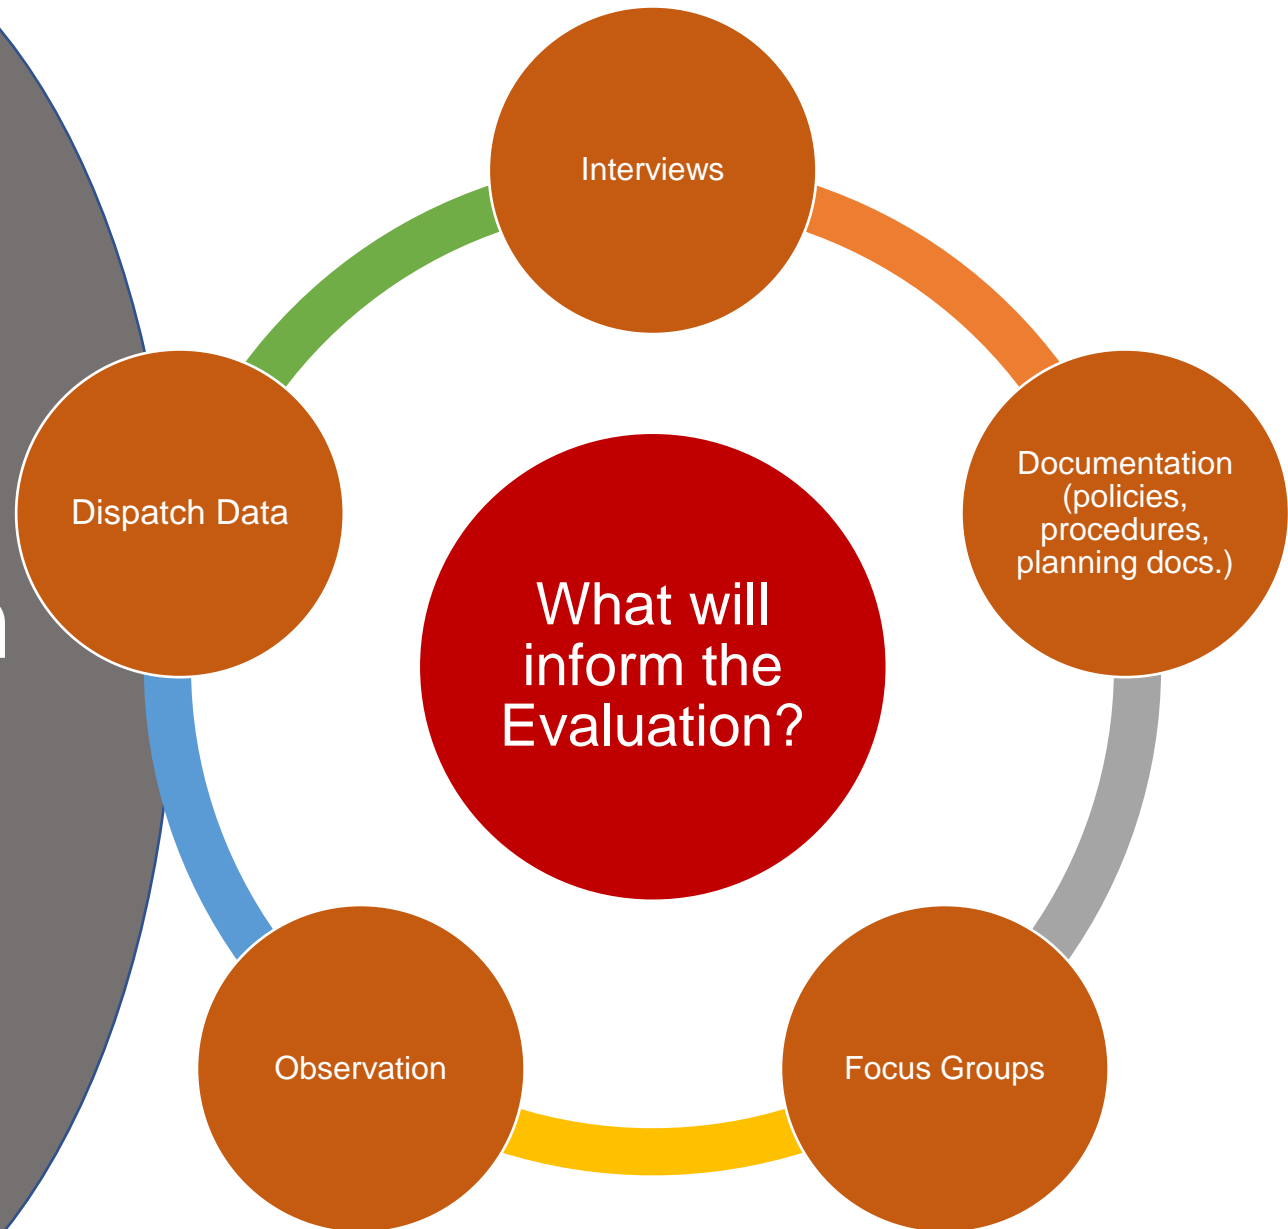

- Seeks to improve.
- Stakeholder focused.
- Informs decision making.
- Demonstrates impact to the community.

Purpose of Evaluation

ARI evaluation examines:

- How effective was the Co-Design process in designing new community wellness centered response models?
- To what extent are new response models being implemented?
- How effective are new response models in improving well-being and centering community, especially for Black and American Indian communities?

Data Collection Methods

Appropriate Response Initiative Evaluation Plan

Analyze Design Methods (In Progress)

Co-Design Case Study

The case study will provide an in-depth, detailed examination of the Co-Design process used to create new community-centered response models. It will focus on the effectiveness of the Co-Design method in designing new community-centered response models. Areas of focus will include:

- Community Engagement
- Relationship and Trust Building
- Shared power
- Equitable representation

Examine Interventions (2023)

Implementation Report

The implementation report will focus on the process of implementing the new response models. Specifically, the report will examine to what extent the new response models are being implemented and will highlight:

- New policies and procedures to support implementation
- Hiring and training of staff
- Coordination of new response models
- # of calls dispatched for new responses

Evaluate Impact (2024)

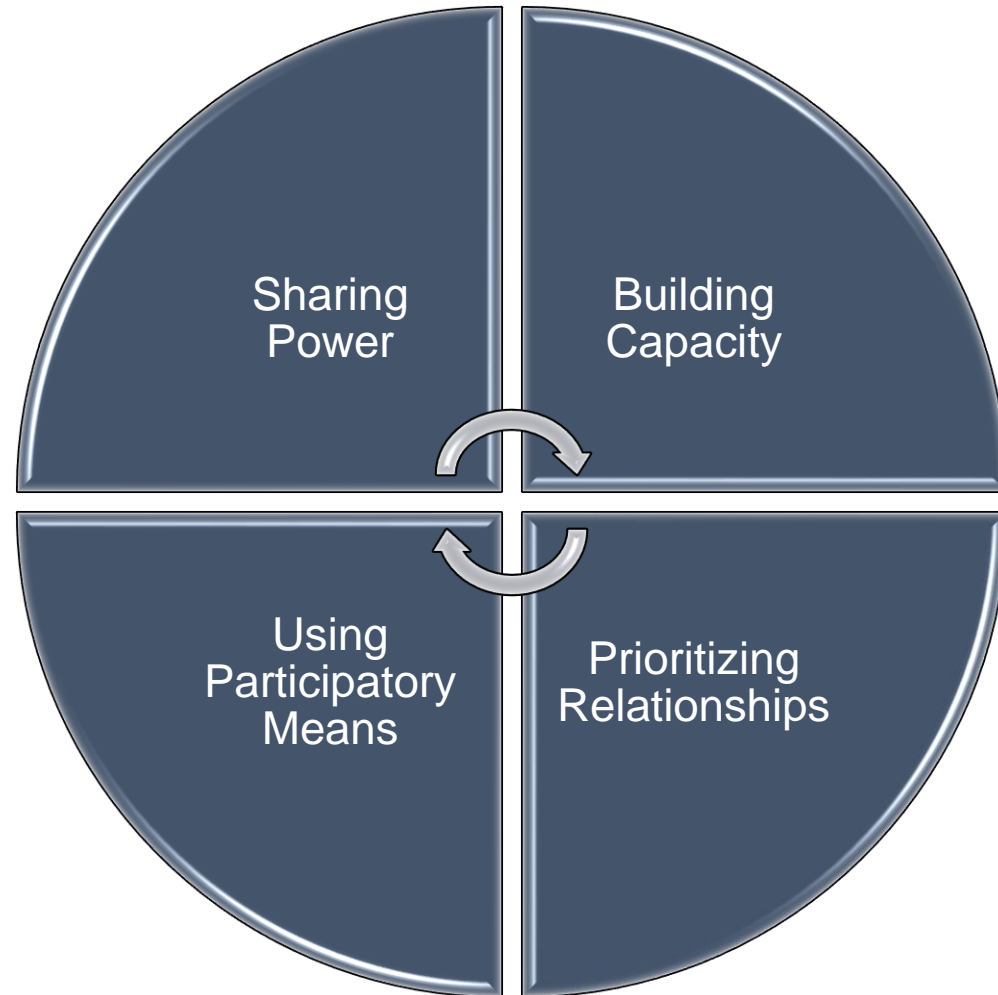

Outcome Report

The outcome report will focus on the effectiveness of the new response models in improving wellbeing and safety, especially for Black and American Indian communities. This report will assess the impact of the ARI by examining the following:

- Referrals to supportive county and community resources
- Trust between Community and Public Safety System
- Arrests and incarceration

Co-Design Case Study

- Describes the work done.
 - Examines the impact of engagement.
 - Asks how the race & health equity lens impacts the work.
